Professor Corbin earned his MSW from Temple University and is a doctoral candidate at the Clinical Social Work Institute in Washington, DC. James is lead clinical faculty at Temple, Assistant MSW Program Director, and Clinical Director of the Military Family Center at Temple, a counseling center for military service members, veterans, and their families. He has written and presented extensively on the subject of neuroscience and its impact on clinical practice and has been a featured presenter for the National Association of Social Workers at their Annual Conference. He was a featured guest on the NPR program "Radio Smart Talk" as an expert on the subject of Reactive Attachment Disorder.

Judy is a trained and certified EMDR therapist. EMDR therapy is the most comprehensive and profound treatment for PTSD. Memories of either a significant trauma or a relatively minor event from childhood can become the basis of current dysfunctional reactions. After EMDR, clients usually report their emotional distress related to the memory has been eliminated. Judy is also trained in Gestalt therapy, Mindfulness and Dialectic Behavioral Therapy
